The Health Connect Jamaica activity brings Jamaica's private sector healthcare providers into national HIV epidemic control efforts. Health Connect Jamaica is building a network of clinicians that target HIV/AIDS patients. The network models ways in which the private sector can play an official role in Jamaica's vision for multisectoral HIV/AIDS care, as described in the country's HIV National Strategic Plan. The network facilitates the linkage of private sector services and data to the public database, helping Jamaica account for diagnosed People Living with HIV (PLHIV) previously considered never linked to care within the public system.

The network provides a client-centered differentiated care model that provides PLHIV with more options for testing, treatment and care. The network also helps the private sector adopt Government of Jamaica continuum-of-care standards.
