www.usaid.gov/honduras

August 2018

Note: Future funding is subject to appropriation by Congress

Consistent with the goals of the U.S. Strategy for Central America, and in broad alignment with the Northern Triangle Countries' Alliance for Prosperity Plan, USAID programs in Honduras seek to promote a more prosperous and safer Honduras that advances inclusive social and economic development among populations most at risk of crime and violence and those living below the poverty line. USAID works to increase the security of vulnerable populations in urban, high-crime areas; sustainably reduce extreme poverty for vulnerable populations in western Honduras; and create a more transparent and accountable national government.

Examples of Program Impact

Greater Capacity to Prosecute Corruption

USAID is supporting both the National Anti-Corruption Council (CNA per its Spanish acronym) and the Mission to Support the Fight Against Corruption and Impunity in Honduras (MACCIH) to strengthen systems to prevent and detect corrupt practices and to assist in the investigation of emblematic, corruption cases, which are then turned over to the Attorney General's Office.

Working together with the Attorney General of Honduras, CNA and MACCIH continues to take on additional high-profile and emblematic corruption cases. Furthermore, USAID assistance to a local organization is a clear example of the Mission's effort to support Honduran-led efforts on their own journey of self-reliance against corruption.

97 Percent Increase on Average Incomes for 29,893 Families

Many Hondurans cite the lack of economic opportunities as their primary reason for migrating. Since 2011, USAID agriculture investments have lifted 17,937 families, or over 89,000 people, out of extreme poverty (defined as $1.25 per day). The Government of Honduras has co-invested $56 million to expand this model of poverty reduction.

90 Percent Decline in Homicides

Just a few years ago, San Pedro Sula was the world's most violent city in one of the world's most violent countries. In the Rivera Hernandez neighborhood, the city's most violent, 136 people were killed in 2013 alone. Since then, tens of thousands of young Hondurans have traveled to the United States to escape from gang violence. Taking a comprehensive approach to homicide reduction in targeted communities in Central America, USAID is combining longstanding violence prevention initiatives with the Department of State's Bureau for International Narcotics and Law Enforcement's criminal rehabilitation, investigation, and community police support.

Thanks to these efforts and leadership from the Government of Honduras, there was a 90 percent decrease in homicides between 2013 and 2017 in the Rivera Hernandez neighborhood of San Pedro Sula.

USAID/Honduras is implementing the following activities to achieve these objectives:

Total Projected Investment: $5 million

The objective of this project is to strengthen ties between community members, faith-based organizations, private businesses, diverse neighborhood partners, and local governments to ensure the sustainability of the urban youth Outreach Centers (OCs) that USAID has and will continue to build. Support to OCs will include decreasing the risk factors for violence and increasing resiliencies, including income-generating opportunities for local youth. USAID will consolidate and expand the OC network by transferring methodologies, management, and long-term strategy to the national NGO FUNADEH to expand these services for at-risk children and youth in among the most violent cities in Honduras, including San Pedro Sula, Tegucigalpa, Choloma, La Ceiba, and Tela. This support from USAID, along with an additional $5 million to be leveraged by FUNADEH, will link and strengthen 70 OCs and benefit almost 30,000 youth.

CARSI Secondary Violence Prevention (PROPONTE Más) ● ●

Duration: January 4, 2016 - January 4, 2020

Total Projected Investment: $24.66 million

The objective of this activity is to continue to detect youth at highest risk of violence or gang involvement and to reduce these factors in youth and their families. Investments will include family intervention therapy and risk-reduction services to a minimum of 2,000 youth and their families in Tegucigalpa, San Pedro Sula, Choloma, Tela, and La Ceiba. USAID support will also increase the number and the skills of local professional and lay counselors. These investments will create and strengthen local support networks and referral systems for more families to receive counseling and find other local and USAID-supported prevention services. The project will help communities sustain these positive behavior changes in their troubled youth and prevent them from engaging in crime, violence and irregular migration in the future.

Total Projected Investment: $10.78 million

The objective of this activity is to disrupt the systems and behaviors that reinforce violence in communities most at risk for crime, gangs, and narco-trafficking activities. This investment works with existing GOH institutions and focuses on creating low-tech and low-cost models of violence disruption that, when successful, can be replicated and implemented by the GOH nationwide. This activity strengthens communities' ability to recognize and manage conflict, decrease the amount of violence due to gang retaliation, and increase community trust and ties to GOH institutions responsible for improving citizen security.

Governance for Citizen Security Activity ● ●

Duration: August 10, 2017 - August 10, 2022

Total Projected Investment: $15.06 million

In 2016, Honduras continued to have a high rate of homicides, with 59 homicides per 100,000 people. Studies have shown that chronically high levels of violence and spikes in homicides are critical drivers of child migration. This activity helps to improve security and reduce migration by supporting communities and local government actors to employ locally driven, comprehensive, and functional crime and violence prevention agendas. The activity will support communities to effectively reduce violence by assisting GOH institutions, civil society, community-based organizations, and others at the local level to improve their ability to analyze, plan, engage, perform, respond, and interact with each other with the explicit purpose of improving citizen security in target areas. Through governance investments, this activity will strengthen the local provision of services and increase citizen participation in efforts to decrease gang-related violence and crime.

USAID will collaborate with public schools, the Ministry of Education, civil society, and other donors at the national, municipal, and local levels. USAID's support will focus on five of Honduras' most violent cities, including Tegucigalpa, San Pedro Sula, Choloma, La Ceiba, and Tela. Investments will link community support networks, the Ministry of Education, and other local social actors to reduce violence, develop violence prevention and response mechanisms, and form alliances with neighborhood schools to support positive behavior changes among at-risk students who qualify for specific prevention services.

CARSI Infrastructure for Citizen Security (FHIS) ● ●

Duration: October 1, 2017 - September 30, 2021

Total Projected Investment: $11,710,033

Research has shown that proper identification, design, and effective use of the infrastructure environment can lead to a reduction in both the opportunity for violence, crime, and the fear of crime. Therefore, USAID will continue to leverage funding from the GOH to build, remodel or refurbish approximately 100 community-led small infrastructure projects to be defined through local stakeholder consultations in the target cities of Tegucigalpa, San Pedro Sula, Choloma, Tela, and La Ceiba. This is a vital component of USAID and the State Department's jointly executed Place-Based Strategy which seeks to reduce crime and violence in the most dangerous neighborhoods of these target cities. Infrastructure projects being funded include schools and educational facilities, health clinics, community parks and safe spaces, youth and community centers, public bus stops, street paving and lighting, and justice and police facilities.

Total Projected Investment: $58.58 million

The objective of this activity is to increase the capacity of 90 municipal governments in western Honduras to provide basic services and increase economic development in their communities. Strengthening governance in western Honduras is key to the sustainability of economic growth accomplishments, which are important in reducing drivers of migration. By supporting both local governments and civil society organizations, this activity will ensure that basic municipal services (e.g., education, nutrition, and water) respond to citizen needs and are managed in a transparent and efficient manner. The activity will strengthen the capacity of local organizations to increase citizen engagement, provide oversight of service delivery, and increase demand for improvements in the quality and accessibility of the services provided by local governments. This activity will also build the capacity of local governments to increase local revenue and develop and implement sectoral plans that reflect local priorities.

(OGP is a multilateral initiative that promotes transparency, citizen empowerment, anti-corruption, and improved governance through technology.) The activity is designed to influence several dimensions that are linked with performance, transparency, and accountability in Honduras' public administration. The ability of the government to generate credible commitments is determined by its capacity to deliver public services based on promises made publicly. The process of generating credible commitments for better quality of services and more transparent institutions also depends on the legitimacy of the process through which policies are discussed, defined, implemented, and monitored. This activity contributes to a national-level public administration that is more transparent and accountable to its citizens.

Total Projected USAID Investment: $16.81 million (USAID/Honduras Funding: $5,813,000)

The objective of this agreement is to strengthen IOM's capacity to support national authorities to improve/expand in-processing and care of returning migrants; contribute to enhanced government capacities to address root causes of irregular immigration, alleviate push factors, strengthen prevention measures; upgrade infrastructure; and improve the availability, quality, and use of information to strengthen the reception and reintegration process. All these actions contribute to prevent the (re)migration of returned migrants. This is the second program contribution to IOM for the safe return and reintegration of Hondurans, especially children and families, since October 2014. Over five years, these investments will support and provide services to approximately 150,000 to 250,000 people, depending on returned-migrant numbers. IOM will also support the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and up to 15 municipal governments to create Municipal Units for Attention to Returnees (UMARs) in the principal communities of origin for irregular migration. The UMARs will facilitate effective reintegration of returnees by maximizing their access to public and social services, including protection, jobs and employability, home improvements, education, and counseling.
